RODRIGUEZ FEARED HUSBAND'S WRATH

OAK FOREST | The woman found dead in her trunk had some disturbing marital troubles. The man she was divorcing is a convicted drug dealer who shot her once and threatened to do it again. » A2

Does the home say anything about the crime?

Neighbors liked the "tiny little woman" found dead in her car. Do they know something that might provide clues to her murder?

No charges against teen for rape hoax

But Heather Krueger (right), who claimed she was sexually assaulted after the South Side Irish St. Patrick's Day Parade, isn't entirely off the hook. Tinley Park officials are making her pay for the cost of the investigation.

Dr. Sudip Bose treats a wounded soldier in Najaf, Iraq. Bose spent 15 months as an Army doctor during the Iraq war. That's one of the longest deployments of a military physician since World War II. He's now an emergency physician at Christ Medical Center in Oak Lawn. SUPPLIED PHOTO

When enemy gunfire and roadside bombs are blasting all around you, when Saddam Hussein requires your urgent medical attention, when America's bravest men and women depend on your expertise to survive, what's the one thing an Army doctor can do?

FOCUS

Fifteen months. That's how long Dr. Sudip Bose spent as an Army doctor in Iraq — one of the longest deployments of a military physician since World War II.

In that span, Bose saw the horrors of war and was responsible for helping its casualties survive countless acts of violence.

He even treated Saddam Hussein, though citing the patient-doctor relationship, he says he can't divulge too much about that experience.

Through it all, Bose maintains confidence in the good side of humanity.

These days he's an emergency physician at Christ Medical Center in Oak Lawn, but Iraq remains near and dear to his heart.

He's taken on a mission to raise awareness about post-traumatic stress disorder, traveling to hospitals, schools and churches throughout the country to spread the word.

Because the horrors of war, Bose says, do not always remain on the battlefield.
