

SUDIP BOSE (WCAS95, FSM99)

The American College of Emergency Physicians and HealthLeaders magazine named Sudip Bose (“Saving Soldiers,” winter 2005) one of America’s health care leaders. During a 15-month deployment to Iraq with the U.S. Army in the mid-2000s, Bose treated thousands of soldiers and Iraqis, including Saddam Hussein, and earned a Bronze Star for his service. Bose works as an emergency physician at the Medical Center Hospital in Odessa, Texas. He also serves as medical director for Odessa and the surrounding county. He has founded several medical education companies and works as an advocate for veterans. He serves as a medical correspondent for a weekly health segment on a CBS station.